Home Town Boy Strikes Gold In Deep South

Canucks all over the world can sleep easily now that one of their own has entered the ranks of stardom.

Dan Dumas from Elk Lick township, Quebec, recently won the Mississippi Mud Pie eating competition sponsored by the Beau Rivage Casino in Biloxi. Event organizers and spectators were amazed at the diligence of the 98 year-old as he consumed 16 mudpies (about 94 kilos) in under three minutes.

"Where's the bloody hell bathroom," Dumas was quoted after being announced the winner.

The victory marked a turning point in the history of the contest as Dumas was the first foreigner to win the coveted prize.

"When he said he was from up north we figured the boy was from Memphis or somethin' cause of the way he talked funny," event sponsor Randall McMorris noted. "Why if I'd a knowed he was from Canerder then we woodnt have let him enter the contest. I'll tell you what though, that feller can sure eat. By the way ya'll know what the hell a kilo is?"

Dumas' winning the prize has effectively ended a years-long practice of having to pay celebrities to say they were Canadian. This was done in order to give credibility to the notion that Canada is a real country.

Dumas' family was thrilled not only to hear that he won the prize, but also that he was still alive. For years the family believed that he perished during the Hindenburg tragedy.

Not letting fame go to his head Dumas will return to work in the electrical field after a celebratory trip to Disney World with friends and family. "I just love riding in the tea-cups!" Dumas exclaimed as he hoisted the contest trophy above his head.

Dumas' victory is no surprise to those familiar with his family. The family name is derived from the Greek 'Dumascoles' which is loosely translated as: Strapping Virile Spartan Warrior. Dumas is just the latest in a long line of over-achievers in the family. His great-great-grandfather, Ulysses Dumas was the first Canadian to discover lightning, and tragically the first Canadian casualty from a lightning strike.

Lunch Break Time Change Causes Havoc At Louisiana Refinery Project

Refinery officials speaking on terms of strict anonymity disclosed to the Gazette that newly appointed hometown hero Dan 'Mud-Pie' Dumas was found in a drainage ditch late Tuesday night. Dumas' beaten body was found next to a jar of pecans and a tub of Country Crock; along with a handwritten recipe for a famous dessert. The search for Dumas began after he missed an important staff meeting earlier in the day.

"We are all horrified by what happened to our beloved friend and co-worker," Glen Gulino stated as he snacked on pecans. "I personally have no idea how this could have happened, nor why anyone would do this to the wonderful fella." Gulino also noted that part of Dumas' recovery would be participation in a new 'Punctuality Class' to combat tardiness. When asked what tardiness had to do with Dumas' rehab; Mr. Gulino pulled a knife on the reporter and stated that the interview was over.

Authorities so far have no leads in the case. Anyone with information has been asked to call Crime Stoppers.
