

Padou Times

GOES GREAT WITH CHICKEN!!!

SPECIAL POINTS OF INTEREST:

- “Rash” decision: Chris ‘hot sauce’ Conatser merges with Excel!
- Johnny Risponse honored with humanitarian award by PETA. Bites head off pheasant during speech.
- Tony Sonnier named Padou Ambassador by Obama.
- Government unveils second phase of stimulus plan. Taxes to increase 500% but will distribute KY Jelly to help offset the pain.
- Obama clarifies direction for country. “Socialism is bad. What I am proposing is a simple equalization of wealth.”
- Hector Rodriguez arrested for violating First Lady. “We were just eating some sheekin!”
- Ghost discovered in Coker Unit. Rowland Evans: “Now maybe they’ll believe me!”
- First Lady discovers previously unknown Puerto Rican heritage; announces pregnancy. President seen purchasing firearm in Gramercy.

DANCE SENSATION COMES HOME!

Most young boys dream of growing up to be an action movie star, pro athlete, fireman, or astronaut. While some set their sights much higher and dream of becoming dancers!

Since he was a child, Lane Cline dreamed of hitting it big and becoming one of those people that get to ride in the limo; sign autographs; and have women toss their underwear at him. The closest he ever came to achieving that dream involved a public indecency charge at a local Victoria’s Secret. While performing court ordered community service distributing feminine hygiene products to prostitutes; Lane decided to act upon his dreams and make them a reality.

In this exclusive interview with the Padou Times Lane speaks of his dream, and the adversity he has faced throughout life.

“Of course I was belittled as a child,” Cline stated as we sat on a bearskin rug at his country home in Ruddock. “All the other kids were playing football or baseball and did not want anything to do with me. I tried to explain that dancing would make them a better athlete. But they would just laugh and beat me up. Some of those girls were tough as nails.”

Lane fought back tears as he continued relating his journey from humble son of an immigrant Malaysian blacksmith, to an adult that Time Magazine described as: “The Greatest Safety Man Since Mabile!” In fact being honored as Time’s ‘Man Of The Year’ was a watershed moment in his life. “I had never been so excited about anything. When I went up to accept the award I literally wet my pants!”

Still, Lane knew that his destiny was calling, and soon after, he decided to pursue the dream in full. He packed up his suitcase along with his Pomeranian Mr. Jingles and headed to New York. It wasn’t long before he was discovered dancing in a Bronx Gentleman’s Club under the stage name ‘Spicy Crawfish’ and was cast as a member of the Riverdance Broadway Troupe. “It was amazing,” Cline said, “I felt like my prayers were answered. Each night I was onstage kicking my feet was like being born again.”

Above: Lane performing at a local crawfish festival, and (below) during his Broadway days (third from right).

“Those Riverdance folks were a swell bunch of people to work with. I learned so much about dance technique from them; especially the whole heel to toe thing.” Lane also elaborated on his training that went beyond the dance routine. “Off the record, I can tell you those Irish girls are freaks! I usually took a different one home after every show and sometimes two or three. Those chicks can do things with potatoes that will make your toes curl. There are times that I get excited just holding a firm Russet in my hands.”

After touring for three years with the Riverdance, Lane decided to semi-retire and return home to Louisiana. “Well, it was time to go. I was tired of the constant pressure of performing at my peak for hours every night; especially after dancing onstage for the better part of the evening.” So with a suitcase full of mementos and a sack of Idaho’s finest he came home. Lane recently opened his own dance studio in Geismar and takes pride in teaching others the art of dance. “It may not be the big city; and I don’t have the fame and fortune. But there is a sense of joy that flows when I see a student like Jason Webb master the fox-trot!” Amen brother. Amen.

JACK HALL P.I. OPENS

Hundreds were onhand at the ribbon cutting for the area’s newest business. Jack Hall Investigations has opened a branch office in Luling. CEO Jack Hall elaborated on why the successful firm decided to come to Padou territory: “Well me, TC, Rick, and Higgins were flying around one day in the helicopter scouting out locations. We had looked at New York and Los Angeles but settled on Luling due to the concentration of hotties and sophisticated culture. “It’s sort of like Hawaii only without the beach.” Hall stated. While the main office in Hawaii will still concentrate on investigating murder, jewelry theft, and other crimes involving scantily clad women. Hall sees a slight shift in direction for cases based out of the Luling office. “While we will still pursue any half-nekkid woman. I figure that most of our cases will involve issues ranging from improperly impregnated livestock to airboat theft. As always though, the case will be solved with gunfire and a quick escape in the helicopter. Followed by an ice cold Dr. Pepper and a hot woman.”

Pictured (L to R): Troy “Rick” Landry, Jack “Magnum” Hall, Lloyd “TC” Clopton, and Frank “Higgins” Tempanaro.

BACKSTREET BOYS REUNION TOUR KICKS OFF AT FRISCO FEST!

They were the pop sensation of the past decade. Selling billions of albums and filling stadiums for concerts throughout the world. Then without warning, and much to the disappointment of their fans, the Backstreet Boys quit at the height of their popularity. The Padou Times was able to catch up with these sexy devils during a break from their performance at Frisco Fest. In an exclusive interview, the original group members:JP “loverboy” Bray, Troy “babyface” Donaldson, Aaron “hunk” Partrich, and Rod “muffin” Remondet sat down over coffee and doughnuts to discuss their career.

PT: Millions of fans wonder why at the height of your career would you guys decide to hang it up and go your separate ways?

Loverboy: Well after our 2002 ‘Skidmarks’ tour we all felt drained both physically and emotionally.

Muffin: Yeah, and we also were getting tired of each other. Especially Troy, he always got the hottest girls.

Babyface: When you got it baby. Flaunt it! Besides you’re just mad because you are such a pansy-ass!

Hunk: The costumes did itch at times and I would get a rash.

Loverboy: You know the thongs didn’t bother me, but those leather pants really chafed my bits and pieces.

PT: So what have you guys been doing for the past few years. I mean you all basically fell off the face of the earth.

Loverboy: Well I started my own rollerblading training school in Amite. It’s called JP’s Rollerblading Training School. I thought the name up myself!

Babyface was a model for Calvin Klein for a couple of years but quit after he fell off the runway during a fashion show in a drunken stupor. After several months in rehab due to a Bit-O-Honey addiction; he is now pursuing his dream of becoming an Etch-A-Sketch artist.

Backstreet Boys (l to r): JP “loverboy” Bray, Troy “babyface” Donaldson, Aaron “hunk” Partrich, and Rod “muffin” Remondet pose for fans.

Aaron has bounced back nicely after the gastric bypass surgery. He stays busy with his Scientology buddies Tom Cruise and John Travolta, and has been spending a lot of time in Washington now that he is dating Obama’s mother-in-law.

And of course Rod won that Oscar for his performance as Frodo Baggins in The Lord Of The Rings.

Even though we have busy schedules we still get together every Saturday morning for a Wii Fit session after cartoons. Wii is so cool, and it is doing wonders for our pecs.

PT: So what do you guys see for yourselves in the future? Is this an honest to goodness permanent reunion or are you all in it for the money?

Loverboy: Money doesn’t matter to us. Face it, we’re already loaded. We just want to show our skills as artists and give back to our fans . Also we support many environmental causes and are active members of PETA, Greenpeace, and the Socialist Party.

PT: So this is really all for the fans and your desire to become better artists?

Hunk: Yeah all that you said and a case of PBR. Hot or cold ain’t nothing like a tasty Pabst Blue Ribbon!

Loverboy: Pabst and a good old sweaty chick! Man toss in a bucket of KFC and it is PAR-TAY TIME!

Muffin: Pabst will mess you up! That stuff is off the chain. Man I got so messed up on Pabst once I ended up nekkid in a field full of sheep with a brand burned in my boodie!

Loverboy: It’s cool it’s in the shape of a target! We gang up on him and play darts when we’re bored.

PT: Okay... So guys any parting words for your fans?

Baby face: Yeah, we just want the fans to know that we are going to put on a great show. I mean you will hear some of our earlier hits like Shave That Thang, and Makin’ Bubbles In The Tub. Plus, we will have all the songs off of our new album Trollin’ For Hootchie Mommas. We don’t really have a schedule for the tour yet; basically we just show up wherever there is a crowd of people. So look for us at your nearest crawfish boil, or Wal-Mart and get ready to jam! Anywhere you see our short yellow tour bus you will know it’s time to Rock On!!!!

“the thongs did not bother me but those leather pants really chafed my bits and pieces.” -JP